STI Policy and Management Journal

The STI (Science, Technology and Innovation) Policy and Management is a scientific journal discussing theoretical and practical issues in science and technology policy for economic competitiveness, research and development management and innovation management. The journal welcomes manuscripts from researchers, academics and practitioners in these areas. The Editor accepts articles and book reviews in STI policy and management. Two volumes are published in a year (July and December).

Journal History

The history of STI Policy and Management Journal spans back over 35 years. It began in 1979 with the publication of Indonesian R&D Management Magazine (Warta Pengelolaan Penelitian dan Pengembangan), which was published four times a year and contained only articles related to R&D management. The magazine functioned as a media for knowledge sharing and communication between the participants of R&D management courses. At the time, it was the only scientific magazine on R&D management. In 1990, the R&D Management Magazine became the National R&D Management Journal, published two times a year containing articles on R&D management, innovation management and R&D commercialization. In early 2003, the title of the journal was changed from the R&D Management Journal into the S&T Policy and R&D Management Journal (Warta Kebijakan Iptek dan Manajemen Litbang). The new title reflected the extension of journal coverage into S&T policy-related issues. The journal published diverse articles concerning not only S&T policy and R&D management, but also management of technology and innovation policy. It contained scholarly reviewed articles on STI policy and management.

In 2015, the S&T Policy and R&D Management Journal (Warta Kebijakan Iptek dan Manajemen Litbang) was not only published as printed
